Trail Description	Holcomb Creek (3N93) is arguably the hardest rock crawling route on the mountain range. It is comprised of 5 rock gardens, several water crossings, a washed-out pass, several steep hill climbs with obstacles on them, and much more. This trail is waiting to cause havoc on your vehicle. 3N93 also provides many splendid views of the area including the Chair of the Jeep Gods, running waterfalls, Holcomb Creek, and dense forest on the west end. Be ready for some of the best wheeling and relaxation you can get in Southern California. In the winter, it does snow on this trail. Since the trail is on the north side of the mountains, snow does stick for long periods of time. If you are up for the challenge, then this trail goes from the easy line being ranked a high 5 to 6 in dry and perfect conditions to the easy line being a mandatory 10+ in less than perfect conditions. The trail is harder going East to West. Side Note: If the middle rock garden is dry which is common in the later summer months. The trails difficulty drops down to a 5. But when wet, the rocks are often extremely slippery and cause a lot of problems getting through.
